

Review of: "“Saving the Forest” with a REDD+ Project: Socio-Ecological Repercussions on Indigenous People in Cambodia"

Emma Sandell

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

A very interesting and important topic.

I find the article well-written, but I lack sources to back up some of the claims, like that deforestation still occurs. Also, a short background of the problems that villagers face. Cambodia shares several problems with deforestation, political struggles, etc., with countries like Laos, Vietnam if sources from Cambodia cannot be found. I would like to have some more in-depth discussion of the difficulties that the villagers face and more focus on the challenges that REDD+ actually brings.

I look forward to reading the article again with some improvements.