

Review of: "Cults and the LGBTQ Community: A Systematic Review Using PRISMA"

José Jesús Sánchez Amate

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic chosen for the development of the publication is very interesting and is directly related to current social events. Also, the writing is clear and concise, showing different references and quotes in the displayed content. However, it is important to contemplate and review the following issues:

- The researcher must show a more objective point of view when carrying out the development of the publication.
- The scientific methodology used is not contemplated and should be indicated and specific for greater scientific rigor. - It is necessary to have greater scientific rigor with regard to an expanded search for research related to the topic and other types of documents that can further justify the content that is exposed.
- You should be careful with the use of terms that may lead to confusion or conflicts of social interest, such as the term "sect." It would be important, before beginning to use such terms, to carry out a terminological review of them to allow the reader a better understanding of what is exposed.

I hope this will help you improve your publication. Greetings.