

Review of: "Enhancing Veterinary Services for Smallholder Farmers in Zimbabwe: A Comprehensive Literature Review"

Giovanni Poglayen¹

¹ University of Bologna

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The English used is really hard to read and understand - I would suggest proofreading by a native speaker
2. The paper is interesting as a picture of a situation common also in other african countries.
3. It is a precise and documented denunciation; the question is: who do we address it to? Who can improve the situation?
Personally, I would suggest international cooperation services with the different European countries.
4. In Italy, the Teramo Zooprophyllactic Institute has a specific support structure for African countries.
Support that translates into both the training of veterinarians and paravets, the structuring of diagnostic laboratories but also the reorganization of veterinary services (if local authorities allow it).
5. Finally I suggest at the end of the article the creation of a table with the difficulties and the relative proposed solutions; it would be useful for a better understanding of the problems
6. Very important and useful the presence of a CAHWs to deal with.