

Review of: "Applying User-Centered Design Methods to Improve The Experience of the NHS APP"

Salome Oniani

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

One area of concern lies in the breadth of coverage of the participants in the study. While the sample size may be sufficient for the scope of the research, a more diverse range of participants could provide deeper insights into the subject matter.

However, it is commendable that the authors themselves acknowledge this limitation in the discussion of findings and implications for the future. This demonstrates a self-awareness of the study's constraints and provides a foundation for future research endeavors in this field.