

Review of: "Treading the Thin Line Between Health Ethics and Patient Care in the Application of Telemedicine: The Case of Sound Ethical Guidelines in Telemedicine in Sub-Saharan Africa"

Fitriana Mawardi¹

¹ Universitas Gadjah Mada

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This study sounds interesting to discuss health ethics related to telemedicine. The study is well written to explain telemedicine and the health ethics aspect. However, it needs to be elaborated on more with examples of telemedicine that are focused on in this study. Because different types of telemedicine, it will have different health ethics aspects. For example, the chat bot AI and mobile health applications have different health ethics aspects. Please explore more about the data security of telemedicine. It is already mentioned in this study; however, it needs to be a concern of discussion.