

Review of: "Clowns, Clown Doctors, and Coulrophobia: A Scoping Review"

Hamide Zengin¹

¹ Eskisehir Osmangazi University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Hi,

Frankly, I don't have any time these days. However, the interesting title makes me want to be a reviewer. In the field of pediatrics, especially in hospitals, clown shows have been held in recent years without questioning whether the child is afraid or not. In this respect, this study will make very important contributions to the literature. Therefore, I congratulate the authors.

I would like to give suggestions below to further enrich the article.

1. Exclusion criteria in article selection should be given under a separate heading.
2. Have you measured quality scores for the studies you included? If measured, which quality assessment tools did you use? Additionally, providing the quality score of each included article in Table 1 will enrich the article.
3. The results section should reflect your results and be expressed more clearly and understandably. It would also be nice if you could offer suggestions.

I wish you all the best.