

Peer Review

Review of: "Reproducing Misogyny: The Indian and Malayali Manosphere"

Raqeibir Rab¹

1. Ahsanullah University of Science & Technology, Bangladesh

The concept of the paper is commendable. The author elaborated on the activities within the manosphere and their engagement in misogynistic discussion. This form of online culture adversely affects society. Authors should present a comparative analysis in a table between the Malayali Manosphere and other linguistic Manospheres. Additionally, it can present a statistical analysis of the discussion data. This paper does not involve any data analysis. The overall analysis section is absent. Although the topic is more likely associated with social issues, I do not believe I am a competent judge. However, the analysis section is inadequately written.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.