Here are some of the points that I would like to share and adress:

1. It would be good if a map of the study location will be provided.
2. Please revise the description of the tables such that it will give a more detailed description about the information and data in the table.
3. Please include the total of respondents in the table.
4. I noticed that there are no data presented regarding the old and new infection, was this information included in any of the table?
5. While the article presented prevalence of the Buruli ulcer, I think it could still be considered as a qualitative study than quantitative. Also could you please address how the prevalence was computed? The formula used was based from where?
6. I think it would be good if a short background about the Buruli ulcer is also included in the introduction.
7. The socio-demographic data and its association with the prevalence of the Buruli ulcer was not clearly and thoroughly discussed. It would be helpful if this could be addressed.
