

Review of: "Alas (Hellas), there is no hope: It's not a crisis, it's a culture"

Anna Triandafyllidou<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Toronto Metropolitan University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is an interesting paper seeking to make sense of the repeated crises that have plagued the modern Greek economy and society. The paper is though not a research article but rather an essay. It has no clear methodology - there is no discussion of how the informants were recruited, how their interviews were analysed, in which period etc - and also there is actually no reference to the fieldwork conducted in the paper as such. There is no references to the interviews. While the paper includes some interesting reflections, it does not qualify for the standards of a research paper.