The article is quite relevant and current with regard to the state of health system amid Covid-19 an pandemic which ravaged every sphere of livelihood, particularly in India. The title of this article is excellently captured. The article's structure organisation in my view meet the requirements of the journal. However, the methodology that was used to arrive to the conclusion unfortunately fell short. It seems that the autor relied on the conceptual framework which is important to highlight this in the article. Ediquate references have been applied. In my view the article is publishable.
