The research entitled Political Economy and Ecology of International Regional Development: Indonesia Urban and Rural Development Loans from the Asian Development Bank (ADB) is very interesting to study and discuss.

The author needs to add several things, including the following:

For the Abstract, it is necessary to add the implications of the research results

There needs to be an analysis of the research gap in this study before deciding that theories relating to foreign aid are not appropriate for the case of Indonesia.

For the results and discussion, the author has outlined a discussion of the pros and cons of foreign aid to developing countries, but the author has not written down what solutions Indonesia needs to take in overcoming the problem of foreign debt in economic development.

In the conclusion section specifically there are no recommendations to related parties according to the benefits to be achieved in the research. The author has not conveyed the limitations of the research and there are no directions for improving further research.
