The article is well-written and allows us to see the evolution of peacebuilding policies after disarmament, demilitarization, and reintegration of ex-combatants. This topic is very important for the Colombian context and could be enriched with a vision of engineering for peace and the way in which society contributes to building peace in the context of the country. Additionally, a review of Buen Vivir and the different generations of peace could help to complement the results obtained, giving greater breadth and robustness to the article.
