

Review of: "[Mini Review] Sinus Bacterial Infections"

Jane Gelinski¹

¹ University of Brasília

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The intent of the study is to briefly review the etiology, clinical manifestations, therapeutic interventions, and preventive measures associated with bacterial sinus infections. However, it is very brief and some aspects of the etiology leave something to be desired. I think the subdivision of themes is unnecessary and I think that just the main topics would be enough in a single text and this way the text would be more direct and robust. But this is the author's privilege, not my imposition. In addition, it would be appropriate to inform in a section on methodology why you chose to carry out a brief review and what criteria you used to carry it out, and the choice of bibliographical references, keywords. I recommend publication as a brief review.