

Peer Review

Review of: "Mental Health-Seeking Behaviour of University Students in Bangladesh: A Cross-Sectional Study"

Asaad Babker¹

1. Gulf Medical University, United Arab Emirates

Improving the paper on "Mental Health-Seeking Behaviour of University Students in Bangladesh" could enhance its clarity, depth, and overall impact. Here are some suggestions:

- Include a comparison of mental health issues among university students in different countries to contextualize the findings within a global framework.
- Expand the discussion on why female students are more likely to seek help despite existing societal pressures, possibly exploring cultural factors in more depth.
- Suggest specific interventions universities might implement to enhance mental health resources, such as workshops, informational campaigns, and peer support programs.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.