Dear author,

Many thanks for your contribution to the world of science, here are a few comments to consider:

Keywords ought to be sorted alphabetically

It is not expected to write about limitations in the abstract

Citation needs to be modified based on the APA method (author/s, year), and full details should be mentioned in the reference part

The introduction part lacks cohesion and a proper academic style

In order to make a better article you have to use newer academic references (last ten to five years), 1961, 1970 and so are too old references to cite, Isn't there any more recent study on the matter?!

The styling and formatting of the article lack proper academic article style and I highly recommend more attention to this part

All tables, figures, maps, etc. have to be appropriately cited. How did you find this table? Is it your original work or belongs to someone else? Etc.

There is no discussion or background in this paper.

Good luck with your scientific journey!
