The text presents an interesting analysis of the exclusion problem in Nigeria. For this, he proposes a review and a historicization of the Eurocentric conceptions of modern enlightenment philosophy, its colonial-racial marks. Whose greatest exponents considered that non-Europeans cannot think because they do not have the status of humanity. I recommend reviewing the conceptual errors referred to Frantz Fanon. In relation to this, I recommend reading Black skin, white masks. I believe that, it will allow the proposed analysis to be strengthened and the conclusions to be argued more solidly.
