The authors acknowledged that the work is just a proof-of-concept (POC) and for this work to be widely applicable, they would have to adapt the method to a wide range of applications, as well as develop software for providing automated support for the method application.

I will recommend that the authors should transit from this POC stage to adapting it for a real problem. This will make the propositions in this work sensible. I strongly recommend further work to be done before accepting this manuscript for publication.
