

Review of: "International Education and the Crises of Cosmopolitanism and Global Citizenship"

Qingqing Wang¹

¹ Arizona State University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The author did a good job to examine the interplay between international education and the challenges pertaining to cosmopolitanism and global citizenship. The overarching structure of the article adeptly articulates a systematic approach, encompassing precise definition, multifaceted analysis, and a comprehensive synthesis of concepts from divergent points.

I think the paper can be strengthened by providing more recommendations at the last part. The authors can provide more detailed information concerning how to combine cosmopolitanism and international education together. For example, through cosmopolitanism curricular design, or collaboration cosmopolitanism between college students. Please refer to the paper "Collaboration cosmopolitanism: what are the effects on the overlooked majority of scientists and engineers?" for more detailed information concerning collaboration cosmopolitanism in higher education.