

Review of: "The Parental Role in Child Sexuality: A Phenomenological Study"

Martina Olcese¹

¹ University of Genoa

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I thank you for the opportunity to review this manuscript, which covers an interesting topic and opens up new research perspectives. The authors report the data and methodology thoroughly, however, I have some concerns with respect to the introduction. In fact, the introduction serves to guide the reader within the topic of interest. I would therefore invite the authors to revise the initial part where there is a reference to personal experience, rather I would emphasize more the gaps in the literature that guide the study. In addition, the introduction appears too broad and with dated bibliographic references. I would try to summarize the introduction in two or maximum 3 paragraphs avoiding lists, but in a more discursive manner and citing recent scientific literature.

I therefore invite the authors to reflect on these aspects.