

Review of: "The Role of Nation and State Institutions in Nigeria's Economy: An Empirical Review"

Shehu Umar Sa'id

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Having read the article, I was able to come up with the following observations

1. Inconsistency, from the abstract of the study is researchers and in the introduction line 1, researcher despite the authors are two.
2. Most of the strong argument were not acknowledged see introduction paragraph 5
3. Under the theoretical framework a statement was made as "that underpins your study" the term your is not expected to be there. And oo any theory underpinning the study as claimed by the authors.
4. 2.2 headings sound to be like the study is a mere lecture note.
5. "Your also repeated in the methodology line 1"
6. Econometric techniques method of analysis is more of a quantitative study, and it was categorically stated in the study abstract that the study is qualitative. If at all this used the two method, then it should be mixed-mode study. There is a contradiction with the first paragraph under methodology and the research approach.
7. The sample of articles review is very scanty, hence, the study findings is very weak, thus, counting on the validity and reliability of the data collected.
8. The article writing style is also poor, there is very limited number of citations, this makes the article to be mere lecture note, not really an academic write up.
9. In the selections or reviewing the 10 articles, the authors have done well in getting the latest studies.

Based on the affirmations reasons or observations, I am recommending a rejection of the paper.

Shehu Umar Sa'id

Department of Accountancy,

Federal Polytechnic, Bauchi,

Bauchi State Nigeria