

Review of: "Weathering changes – livelihood adaptation to weather shocks in rural India by disadvantaged social groups"

Haibo Ruan<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Central China Normal University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. Judging by the title, the article focuses on how vulnerable groups are responding to the impacts of climate change, so in considering social networking as an influencing factor, is there a possibility that due to lower incomes, vulnerable groups don't have a sufficient material base to support the purchase of electronic products such as cell phones and computers?
2. Could more of the research data chosen throughout the article be post-2020? Is there an immediacy problem with the data if it is chosen from an earlier year?
3. COVID-19 have been an important context that cannot be ignored in recent years, can the author consider adding epidemics as one of the influencing variables?