

Review of: "Can a Rudderless Species Survive?"

George Mikhailovsky

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The proposed model looks interesting, although it extremely simplifies real situations. However, the author realizes this and explicitly states it. Obviously, it cannot be applied to any particular species and/or individual. Nevertheless, the conclusions drawn from it, related to the interaction between species, range expansion, and improvements in their navigational skills, are not contrary to either biological meanings or common sense. They may be useful for biological analysis of the phenomenon in question.