

Review of: "Enhancing Veterinary Services for Smallholder Farmers in Zimbabwe: A Comprehensive Literature Review"

Joseph Musara<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of the Free State

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The review is addressing a persistent challenge in Zimbabwe's livestock sector and add to the body of literature. It is well written and targets the smallholder sector which is extremely vulnerable to various calamities including diseases. It would also be interesting to add a paragraph on indigenous knowledge systems and how they support the modern approaches to dealing with diseases. This will also help to understand how these two interfaces can complement each other going forward as new diseases emerge and old ones reemerge. I would also be glad to see another paragraph on the human-wildlife interface were most diseases are transmitted for example in Trans Frontier Conservation Area (TFCA) boundaries such as Chiredzi, Mbire, Chirundu among others.