Interesting study, but the manuscript contains some inconsistencies. It is suggested that the authors follow the comments in order to improve it.

1. In the abstract, authors should mention a glimpse of key findings, the methods used, and a statement about a one-sentence policy suggestion.
2. The introduction section should be thoroughly improved by clearly mentioning the motivations and, specifically, the value addition of this article. It would be better if the authors separate the introduction and literature review sections and highlight the value of this article at the end of the introduction section. The article's contribution should be compared with similar articles in this field conducted earlier.
3. The authors fail to identify what the research gap is. Therefore, it is recommended that they cite similar review articles conducted earlier and explain what is added by this article compared to those earlier studies.
4. Also, during the preparation of a manuscript, authors should be careful in describing the methodology section before going on to describe the results. In the methodology section, the data collection process, sources or survey methods, and, most importantly, why the particular method they chose should be described.
5. The conclusion should be more concise and concrete. Policy suggestions should be based on the findings of the article.
