Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The research has novelty. They used participants from across disciplines and regions.
2. The paper ought to have clearly defined the concept of academic dishonesty.
3. The authors ought to have clearly identified the gaps in the previous studies. This would provide the rationale for the present study.
4. The authors should have provided research questions.
5. The authors could provide a discussion section by interacting their findings with the literature review.
