

Review of: "[Perspective] The possibility of a silent methamphetamine catastrophe in Bangladesh"

Prama Bhattacharya¹

¹ Indian Institute of Technology Bhubaneswar

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This concise perspective article illuminates the escalating methamphetamine crisis in Bangladesh and examines the pervasiveness of Yaba addiction and its accompanying difficulties. According to the study, Bangladesh has a significant and enduring problem with drug addiction, particularly to codeine-based cough syrup, heroin, marijuana, and sedatives. The article details the rampant smuggling of crystal methamphetamine, a highly addictive recreational drug, into Bangladesh, resulting in a 30% increase in addiction rates. The paper is eloquently written and highlights a highly relevant issue that warrants the attention of scholars, public health experts, and policymakers. In my opinion, the paper does not require any further revision or elaboration. However, there is much scope for conducting empirical research in this area. I will strongly recommend the author to take a lead in that as well. Congratulations!