This is an interesting study and a timely topic for investigation, analysing crimes in public spaces of New Delhi through news reports. Overall, the article is well written and organised, and the study is discussing the need and possibility of integrating four dimensions of Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) principles into analysis of urban public spaces. The paper is an excellent read and a resource for people working in the related area. On the whole, this is an excellent contribution to knowledge in the associated field.
