

Review of: "Examining the Impact of Green Finance on Carbon Emissions in India through Energy Consumption Optimization"

Sanchita Roychowdhury¹

¹ Anglia Ruskin University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic taken up by the authors is relevant and important. There is a need to conduct studies in the field with context to India. However, the following observations are made while reading the article:

1. The introduction is not to the point and does not address the problem statement clearly.
2. There is a need to add relevant literature from the past decades to highlight the importance of the study conducted.
3. The data used is of a very short period and the results may be biased due to this fact.
4. There is no data or results from the analysis provided and hence the study cannot be called reliable.
5. The conclusion lacks the limitations and future scope of study.

Overall the article seems incomplete, not clearly written and requires a lot more work.