A well organized manuscript. The subject is interesting. However, I would recommend some minor points. We know that some diseases such as Crohn's, hereditary angioedema lead to a picture mimicking acute abdomen. I think it would be good to add pathophysiology to the manuscript. Such a sentence can be added " Edema of the intestinal mucosa can lead to transient obstruction and severe abdominal pain that can mimic acute abdomen". I recommend this case report for pathophysiology; SAĞ, Sefa, et al. A Rare Cause of Severe Abdominal Pain in Children: Hereditary Angioedema. Gazi Medical Journal, 2017, 28.2.

Sincerely....
